

Hillcrest House and the Prince of Wales Trinity Living Center have both been converted from traditional apartment buildings to 60 unit SRO (Single Room Occupancy) residential hotels. The design of each project is developed specifically to meet the needs of former homeless individuals and provides the lowest income population in our society with a permanent, high quality housing solution. Energy efficient mechanical systems and design features are incorporated in to the buildings rehabilitation. Special ventilation systems designed to limit the spread of airborne diseases are installed as well.
